

Default Question Block

Informed Consent

Title of Research: What Makes a 'Good' Forensic Anthropologist? Outlining a Cultural Model of Forensic Anthropology Practice using Cultural Consensus Analysis (UWF IRB# 2021-199)

This freelisting exercise constitutes the first of two steps toward generating a cultural model of “good” forensic anthropological practice. In this step, we ask you to consider particular experiences, perspectives, methods, etc. that make a “good” forensic anthropologist. The freelist takes approximately 10 minutes to complete. There are no known personal risks or benefits associated with writing this freelist. All data will be collected anonymously; none of your personal information will be collected, nor will any demographic data be gathered. Clicking on the link to the freelist will constitute your consent to participate, and your confirmation that you are 18 years of age or older. You may subsequently choose to stop taking the freelist at any time.

If you have any questions or concerns regarding this project, please contact Dr. Meredith Marten in the Anthropology Department at The University of West Florida at (313) 575-3128, or by email at mmarten@uwf.edu.

Statement of Consent: By beginning this freelist, I certify that I agree to participate in the research project described and affirm that I am 18 years of age or older. Permission is given voluntarily and without coercion or undue influence. It is understood that I may discontinue participation at any time without penalty or loss of any benefits to which I may otherwise be entitled.

In your opinion, what are things good forensic anthropologists do, or have? In other words, what makes a good forensic anthropologist? Your list could include things like experiences, qualifications, perspectives, methods, etc. Include anything you think is relevant. The text boxes are numbered, but your responses do not need to be ranked in any order.

1

2

3

4

5

6

7

8

9

10

11

12

13

14

15

If you wish to enter more than 15 attributes, feel free to list them here.

Powered by Qualtrics